COOKIES POLICY

The present cookies policy explains what cookies are and how are they used on our website.

Whenever you browse through our website, is generated a small text file (hereafter named Cookie). Cookies are stored in the browser or in the hard disk of the device used.

This file will allow you, not only an easier and quicker access, but will also allow you to guarantee a customized browsing experience.

The use of Cookies allows us to collect technical information regarding the device used, namely the IP (Internet Protocol), the operating system and the type of browser. This information is only used to improve the quality of your visit and is not disclosed to third parties.

Type of Cookies used:

- Essentials: these cookies are necessary to access specific areas of our website, allow browsing on the website and using its apps;
- Analytical: these cookies allow us to gather information related to the use that is made of our website, such as the number of visitors of the website,
- Functionality: these cookies allows that pages of the website memorize the options chosen by the user, meaning that your preferences towards the use of the website are kept,
- Advertising: these cookies are essential to allow the presentation of advertising to the users, measure the advertising effectiveness and adapt it to the user. However, on their own, do not identify the user.

You may block our cookies when you activate the settings of your browser that allows to refuse the setting of all or some cookies. You can obtain more information regarding cookies and how to exclude and control them in http://aboutcookies.org or click Help on the menu of your browser.

Nevertheless, it is important to point out that if you do not allow the use of cookies, there may be some functionalities that you will not be able to use.

We reserve the right to proceed to alterations and/or revisions to the present Cookies Policy, being any alterations and/or revisions duly communicated and published on our website.